Q: HOW HAS THE RISE OF SOCIAL COMMERCE IMPACTED MARKETS WORLDWIDE, AND WHAT ROLE DOES CHINA PLAY IN THIS LANDSCAPE?

Social commerce has experienced rapid growth in both developing and developed markets, with regions like Africa skipping the traditional PC and smartphone-based e-commerce stages. China, as a key player in this emerging landscape, benefits from a well-established, advanced, and reliable supply chain. Furthermore, the country's unique advantages, including a skilled workforce and competitive business environment, set it apart from other nations and make it an influential force in the global social commerce sphere.

Q: WHAT CAN FOREIGN FIRMS LEARN FROM CHINA'S SOCIAL COMMERCE CUSTOMER SERVICE AND USER EXPERIENCE APPROACHES?

Social commerce isn't just gamified online shopping, or buying recommendations from your favourite influencer on instagram here - it's a full stack go-to-market sales strategy for many brands, and brands who are doing it successfully leverage highly localised, highly gamified physical Brand Experiences - with scannable integrations, that take shoppers straight back online - so they are able to make regular, repeat contact through social platforms. It's a very exciting space.

Q: WHAT SOCIAL COMMERCE TRENDS DO YOU SEE IN CHINA TODAY THAT WILL BOOM IN 2023/24?

The recent 6.18 shopping festival highlighted the significance of content in China, where short videos, influencers, and livestreaming gained traction on Alibaba's marketplaces. Generative AI tech is also being explored to reduce content costs and drive further sales.

Apple product experts conducted their first livestream during 618, offering filmmaking tips and demonstrating the use of the Apple Watch for workouts. The livestream garnered impressive engagement with 1.3 million viewers and 300,000 likes within just one hour. Content played a pivotal role for many retailers during the 6.18 event.

Q: WHAT ARE THE KEY FEATURES OF SOCIAL COMMERCE IN CHINA? ARE THEY DIFFERENT TO THE REST OF THE WORLD, IF SO, HOW?

China's social commerce features integration with social media, live-stream sales, group buying, influencer marketing, and a mobile-first approach. Platforms like WeChat enable product discussion, recommendations, and in-app purchases. Live-streaming e-commerce on platforms like Taobao Live provides interactive, engaging shopping experiences.

Group buying on platforms like Pinduoduo offers bulk discounts, creating a community feel. Influencers significantly influence consumer choices, and activities are predominantly mobile-based. This model contrasts with Western social commerce, more linked to platforms like Facebook and Instagram, and less integrated with messaging and live-streaming.

THE KEY FEATURES OF SOCIAL COMMERCER

SOCIAL MEDIA PROVIDES EXCELLENT CONTEXT

QUALITY CONTENT REACHES TARGET AUDIENCES WHEN THEY'RE READY TO BUY

Consumers on social media are often more open to high-quality brand narratives and content because the platforms are where they connect with friends and family and where they look for recommendations. They can also see purchases made by KOLs and friends so their purchase motivation is higher.

Businesses need content that showcases their unique selling points, encourages social sharing, connects emotionally and demonstrates scenarios that resonate with consumers.

INTERACTIVE FORMATS THRIVE ON SOCIAL MEDIA

INTERACTIVE, METAVERSE AND WEB3 MARKETING DO WELL ON SOCIAL COMMERCE SITES

Social media's interactive nature is a critical driver for social commerce.

Brands that smartly leverage social media's highly visual, participatory qualities and create engaging content make their mark on social commerce platforms.

For example, Douyin and Burberry's metaverse marketing campaign, which incorporated Douyin's Zaizai feature that allows users to create avatars, got 150 million views.

THE KEY FEATURES OF SOCIAL COMMERCE

HIGH-QUALITY CONTENT INFLUENCES PURCHASING DECISIONS

To deliver high-quality content, it's important to understand your audience's needs, preferences, and pain points. Then create content featuring scenarios that resonate with them and show your unique selling points.

INTERACTIVE EXPERIENCES ENHANCE ENGAGEMENT AND SATISFACTION

Provide unique interactive experiences that enhance consumer engagement. This includes highly visual, participatory, collectable and gamified experiences.

PRIVATE TRAFFIC IS IMPORTANT TO CONNECT WITH YOUR AUDIENCE

After creating communities for your private traffic and members, give them a reason to stay. Offer members special access, discounts and great customer service. Make sure that your communication is consistent with your brand identity and values.

Q: HOW DOES CHINA'S SOCIAL COMMERCE COMPARE TO TRADITIONAL COMMERCE, AND WHAT ARE THE REASONS FOR ITS CURRENT STATE?

Traditional commerce is still the main sales channel, but social commerce is growing very fast. It's giving an opportunity to young brands in the Chinese market, which don't have big budgets for huge promo campaigns, but use creative approaches to reach their TA.

The main difference: Traditional Commerce - "Give me what I want" v. Social Commerce "Tell me what to buy".

So if you know how to present your product and create demand you will win on Douyin and RED, which also will increase your sales on traditional platforms such as Tmall or JD.

Q: HOW HAS SOCIAL COMMERCE AFFECTED CHINA SALES, AND IS IT A VIABLE OPTION FOR BRANDS TARGETING THE CHINESE MARKET?

Back in 2018, I've seen many sales staff in stores creating WeChat groups of customers and using those groups to bring a more personal feel to sales. China is a country of huge numbers and so this kind of quasi-personalisation was a way to gain loyalty and push sales. Live-streaming had already started, but it wasn't a must-have, but more of a way to gain a unique position as a foreign brand. Since then the trend to livestreaming had accelerated. The "edutainment" aspect is a completely different way to look at the consumer journey than the "functional" approach more favoured in Europe & it's hard for brands to adjust and train their staff accordingly. This aspect of branding is always a difficult line to walk for overseas brands: to keep the core messaging whilst also being relevant for Chinese consumers.

If brands want to work with KOLs or KOCs it's actually quite hard to make the choice of who truly fits to the brand values, when you are on the other side of the planet and don't understand the language well enough to pick up on nuances. I believe that social commerce is a good opportunity for brands looking to explore the Chinese market, however they have to be careful to choose the right collaboration partners and channels as the market is so fragmented.

Q: WHAT ARE CHINA'S TOP SOCIAL COMMERCE BRANDS, AND WHAT ARE THEIR SUCCESSFUL AND UNSUCCESSFUL STRATEGIES?

Florasis has a long term focus on leveraging Douyin's social commerce system. Initially, Li Jiaqi played a significant role in establishing Florasis as a popular internet brand. However, in recent years, the brand has shifted its focus to hosting live sessions on its own, aiming to enhance its brand image.

It's important to note that the brand is currently in the process of reducing its reliance on top-tier influencers like Li Jiaqi. This shift is driven partly by the high costs associated with such influencers and the uncertainty surrounding their long-term impact. To facilitate this transition and enhance the development of its private customer base, the brand should consider leveraging other platforms such as the WeChat ecosystem.

Q: WHAT ARE KEY DIFFERENCES BETWEEN CHINESE SOCIAL COMMERCE AND OTHER REGIONS, AND HOW CAN FOREIGN FIRMS ADAPT THEIR STRATEGIES ACCORDINGLY?

China's social commerce differs from other regions due to mobile-first consumers, deep integration of social media and e-commerce, and the popularity of live-streaming sales. In the west, shopping shares a 50-50 split with PC and usually one of the big social media giants such as Facebook, Instagram, Pinterest or TikTok. Facebook had expanded from being a social networking site to include Marketplace, where individuals can buy and sell items locally.

Instagram introduced shopping features that allow businesses to tag products in their posts with links that lead directly to their online store. Pinterest has "Buyable Pins" that allow users to make purchases without leaving the platform.

Q: WHAT ARE THE MOST IMPORTANT TRENDS FOR CHINA IN 2023 IN TERMS OF CONSUMPTION AND COMMERCE?

Consumers are definitely more cautious this year than in past years and we are seeing this reflected in much more careful purchasing behaviour. Consumers are still spending but they are becoming much more intentional in their purchases, are doing more research, and are trading down when possible.

We are also seeing an ongoing shift towards more searches for specific brands rather than searches tied to product function. This means that it is more important than ever for brands to be leveraging social platforms in China to educate consumers about brand history and heritage, to build awareness, and to build engagement.

Q: HOW DO CHINESE COMPANIES UTILISE SOCIAL MEDIA PLATFORMS FOR SOCIAL COMMERCE, AND WHAT CAN FOREIGN FIRMS LEARN FROM THEIR STRATEGIES?

Chinese brands, in general, exhibit a fearless willingness to explore new formats and take unconventional approaches, unburdened by the need for a proven methodology. They embrace a test-and-learn mindset, even if it means deviating from their established brand image. This mindset is deeply rooted in a fast-paced culture that embraces rapid change.

Foreign companies can learn from this by adopting a similar mindset of brand exploration, avoiding excessive overthinking and reliance on data.

WECHAT AND FACEBOOK

ECOSYSTEMS THAT FOCUS ON SLIGHTLY DIFFERENT THINGS

WeChat in China (Weixin) is different from the international version of the app. It's an integrated ecosystem with messaging, personal and brand accounts, search, ads, video (WeChat Channels), mini programs that brands can use as stores and an in-app payment option that is widely trusted.

After prohibited content alert

DOUYIN

There are strong restrictions on what can be sold and promoted on Chinese social commerce platforms and how people can present themselves. This is monitored on Douyin by AI and algorithms.

Fitness celebrity Will Liu@ 刘耕宏 was banned from livestreaming due to his muscular chest. Doyen's AI content detection determined that he was nursing.

DIFFERENT CONTENT STANDARDS ON DOUYIN AND TIKTOK

CONTENT CONTROL IS STRONGER ON THE DOMESTIC VERSION OF THE APP

TIKTOK

In the West, particularly in Europe, there are strong concerns about inappropriate content and advertising to young people on TikTok, the international version of Douyin, where 25% of users are under 19 years old.

In June, 2022, TikTok changed its policies around branded content to prohibit the promotion of alcohol, cigarettes and get-rich-quick schemes. Paid ads must also be identified with a label. In July, 2022, the app added options to help filter out topics, words and hashtags people don't want to see in their feeds.

A post featuring a UK influencer dancing with cans of alcohol claiming they were low calorie and “actually get you drunk” was banned for contravening alcohol ad rules.

GROUPON AND PINDUODUO

GROUP BUYING IS STILL THRIVING IN CHINA

GROUPON

Groupon was founded in the United States in 2008 and It filed for an IPO in 2011. It was focussed on group discount deals of 50-90% at local businesses. It had a large user base and was extremely popular from around 2010 to 2016 with record-breaking sales in 2014, its most successful year. Alibaba Group acquired a 5.6% stake in 2016.

Although the company still exists today, its group-buying user base is much smaller and the company is a very different entity after acquiring many of its competitors and companies in other sectors.

The company cut 500 jobs in August, 2022 and another 500 in January, 2023.

GROUP BUYING IS STILL THRIVING IN CHINA

PINDUODUO

Pinduoduo was founded in China in 2015 as an agricultural retailer and later pivoted to connect customers with merchants in additional categories including clothing, electronics and home appliances. It also has its own logistics system.

The platform has 2 prices, one for solo purchases and one for group purchases. The bigger the group, the bigger the discount and you can earn free shipping, free products and other rewards through games and competitions that incentivize referrals and social sharing.

It began trading on the Nasdaq in 2018 and by 2020 it had its first quarterly net profit as a publicly traded company.

SOCIAL COMMERCE PLATFORMS COMPARED

CHINESE SOCIAL COMMERCE PLATFORMS HAVE HIGHLY INTEGRATED ECOSYSTEMS

When comparing China's WeChat (Weixin) to Facebook, it has a more tightly integrated ecosystem that enables smooth payment options and in-app shops for brands. Facebook's ecosystem is more centred on messaging and sharing video and images.

CONTENT CONTROL AND STANDARDS ARE DIFFERENT ON DOUYIN AND TIKTOK

Douyin has strict controls on presentation on the app as well as on the items that can be sold and promoted. AI and algorithms play a big role in enforcing its standards. TikTok has a very young user base so there are regulations to restrict advertising to them.

GROUP BUYING APP PINDUODUO IS GROWING IN CHINA BUT GROUPON HAS FADED IN THE WEST

The original group buying app Groupon reached its peak in 2014 and has been shrinking ever since. Meanwhile in China, Pinduoduo is still growing in terms of users and profit.

Q: WHAT ARE THE KEY FEATURES OF SOCIAL COMMERCE IN CHINA? ARE THEY DIFFERENT TO THE REST OF THE WORLD, IF SO, HOW?

The Chinese model of social commerce boasts a unique set of characteristics, such as group buying, livestreaming, mini-programs, private traffic, and influencers, which have not yet been fully incorporated into global social commerce models.

However, there's one core feature that underlies China's remarkable success and distinctiveness in social commerce: the blurring line between social media and e-commerce platforms. In China today, the demarcation between the two is extremely thin as social media applications have integrated e-commerce functionalities and vice versa, leading to the creation of synergistic social-shopping ecosystems.

Q: WHICH TOP CHINESE AND INTERNATIONAL FMCG BRANDS EXCEL AT SOCIAL COMMERCE?

My favourite example is probably HeyTea, who have succeeded in transforming that most Chinese of products into an experience. I love the way they combine online and offline touch-points to enhance their brand awareness e.g. hiring experts to talk about their products, creating a sense of scarcity and popularity by lots of new launches, collabs with popular IP shows such as Meng Hua Lu a few months back, supporting their premium price positioning with sustainable packaging and straws.

For global brands, Lays had a successful approach in 2021 when they jumped on the “guochao” wagon and collaborated with 3 local brands to produce crisps with distinctly Chinese flavours. The products provoked a viral response from consumers who were encouraged to share pictures and opinions online. This kind of co-branding has worked pretty well for many brands.

Q: IN YOUR VIEW, HOW'S SOCIAL COMMERCE IN CHINA DIFFERENT FROM THE REST OF THE WORLD?

Well, the needs in China are far different from other markets and it's mainly due to its size. You can't easily go to do offline shopping, too time consuming and needs (variety) are far much more bigger than other countries. Therefore e-commerce has been the solution to solve those issues. It made local players much more innovative and stronger to reach the current digital level of China market.

Social commerce has been the latest step to catch Chinese consumers by bringing the so-called social link to the purchase. Live-streamers or KOL have been replacing the offline Sales Assistant. They could bring a proximity that you don't have in traditional e-commerce.

Rest of the world can, most of time, go downstairs their home to find what they need. In China, you can't.

Q: HOW ARE SOCIAL COMMERCE PLATFORMS RESHAPING SHOPPING EXPERIENCES IN CHINA?

As traditional e-commerce growth slows in China, social commerce platforms like Douyin, Kuaishou, WeChat, and Pinduoduo have driven most of the country's online retail growth. Social commerce sales increased from $352 billion in 2021 to $406 billion in 2022, driven by livestreaming.

Live commerce, which accounted for over a third of social commerce, has continued to grow, with categories like fashion on Douyin outselling Tmall. This shift highlights Chinese consumers' desire for entertaining shopping experiences, leading to higher conversion rates on livestreams compared to traditional channels.

Q: WHAT IS THE 2023 STATUS OF CHINESE CONSUMERS? IS CONSUMPTION RECOVERING OR SLOWING, AND WHAT CAN WE EXPECT IN H2 2023 AND H1 2024?

Consumers are on a slow and cautious recovery, but the recovery is not as quick and robust as people would like or expect. China's youth unemployment rate hit a new high of 20.8% in May (those aged between 16 to 24).

These uncertain economic conditions are making people more cautious and selective with their purchases and money. Official data also show slowing sentiment.

I expect the recovery to continue for the second half of 2023, but still at a slower pace. Geopolitical tensions and weak global demand will continue to depress China's recovery, but the country is likely to remain a key driver of global growth this year.

Q: WHAT ARE SOME OF THE CHALLENGES THAT FOREIGN COMPANIES MAY FACE WHEN ENTERING THE CHINESE SOCIAL COMMERCE MARKET, AND HOW CAN THESE BE OVERCOME?

Many foreign companies find that there is already a conversation taking place in China about their brand. The only question is, should they be part of that conversation or not?

International brands typically engage in one-way communication in their home market. The social media conversation is two-way marketing. The consumer is empowered and has a voice in the process. So foreign companies need to get their game up and engage the shopping public on their terms.

1 GEN Z

Gen Z, usually referring to those born from 1995-2009, is spending more money online every month than they used to. They're very dependent on the mobile Internet and their favorite platforms are Kuaishou and Douyin.

New forms of entertainment, such as scripted role-plays and problem solving games, capture their interest as much as animation and video games, and Gen Z is most concerned about product quality when shopping.

GEN Z USER PROFILE

342 MILLION GEN Z USERS ARE ACTIVE ONLINE

CHINESE INTERNET USERS BY AGE GROUP (2022)

Young people are a key internet user and consumer group in China. There are an estimated 342 million of them active online. They're often tech-savvy and highly connected, making them more likely to shop online and use mobile payment methods.

GEN Z USER PROFILE

GEN Z IS MORE LIKELY TO BUY ON IMPULSE

Before the pandemic, Gen Z was the age group most likely to buy products spontaneously. What's even more interesting is that this was also true when compared to their Gen Z counterparts in Australia (29%), Japan (27%) and South Korea (21%).

RATIO OF RESPONDENTS IN CHINA WHO STRONGLY AGREE THAT THEY "BUY PRODUCTS ON THE GO"

GEN Z USER PROFILE

GEN Z IS LESS SURE ABOUT THEIR FUTURE CONSUMPTION

Because Gen Z consumers tend to live in the moment and buy on impulse, when asked about their future expectations for purchases, they scored lower than all other age groups. They're also at an age where they are only starting to understand what kinds of purchases are necessary and what categories they will select from in the future. Given this, and the fact that many still rely on their parents for money, it makes sense that the category of items they seem to understand best is necessities.

INTEREST IN PETS BY GENERATION

Index = $\frac{\text{Proportion of this group who see having pets as important}}{\text{Proportion of the general population who see having pets as important}}$

The pandemic and environmental concerns have increased consumers' desires to stay home and decompress, especially Gen Z.

Compared with other age groups, Gen Z's preference for pets is higher and their attitude toward pets is that they generally see them as companions or family members.

Q: WHAT ARE THE PREVALENT TRENDS IN CHINA'S PRIVATE DOMAINS FOR MARKETING, SALES, AND CUSTOMER SERVICE?

A lot of customer service and CRM is happening on social media, especially through private communications like WeChat chats. This delivers the communication where customers are, i.e. WeChat. Brands used to have private group chats for their (potential) customers which creates a sense of community. I see more brands and companies have 1-on-1 chats with their customers with tailored messaging and personalised vouchers. It's great for engaging with customers and driving sales.

Q: WHAT ARE SIGNIFICANT BARRIERS OR THREATS TO SOCIAL COMMERCE DEVELOPMENT IN CHINA, THE USA, EUROPE, AND BEYOND?

The foundations were laid for e-commerce between 2004 and 2014, the “New Retail Model” evolved in the years that followed and social commerce was/is the perfect evolution of digital commerce. Consumer demands will drive the new forms it takes in China. The only threat is the view that the government takes towards social commerce, influencers, cross border and data.

In the rest of the world the only barriers to growth right now are lack of information about what social commerce (that actually focuses on native commerce) is and how it is a cornerstone of “Immersive Commerce”. e-commerce in the West is flagging and is in need of evolution and rejuvenation. Social commerce is an important new cornerstone for digital. Consumers are fatigued with an e-commerce model that hasn’t changed much in ten years. Interactive and immersive commerce based on the China model is being employed well by some brands and retailers but it must, and I believe will, see mass adoption in the next two years.

Q: WHAT TRENDS AND INNOVATIONS WILL SHAPE CHINA'S SOCIAL COMMERCE FUTURE, AND HOW CAN FOREIGN COMPANIES ADAPT?

Trend 1: Content is key.

The surge in content-driven purchases on social media stems from engaging, compelling content. For social commerce success, businesses need to create captivating content that drives conversions.

Trend 2: It's all about community building.

Community building is crucial in social commerce as it enables direct two-way communication between brands and consumers.

Trend 3: Closed loop consumer journey from search to transaction.

Social media platforms play a significant role beyond driving traffic to traditional e-commerce websites. Chinese consumers increasingly rely on social media for product searches, bypassing search engines.

Q: WHAT CAN FOREIGN COMPANIES LEARN FROM CHINA'S USE OF INFLUENCER MARKETING IN SOCIAL COMMERCE?

Foreign and local companies in China are harnessing innovative tactics that all marketers, particularly those eyeing China, should take note of. It's common for brands to utilize high-cost, top-tier influencers for a quick spike in reach and trial, but fleeting engagements don't effectively foster brand recognition. Aspiring brands in China should focus on forging lasting relationships with individual influencers and influencer communities.

It's beneficial to collaborate with niche influencers who command a smaller, yet fiercely loyal audience to grow your brand organically. Though their follower count may not be staggering, their followers' trust in them can be leveraged to garner genuine interest in your product. Additionally, leveraging influencer communities, such as hobby clubs or fan groups, can help a brand tap into a solid and dedicated follower base.

Q: WHAT ARE KEY TRENDS SHAPING CHINA'S SOCIAL COMMERCE FUTURE, AND HOW CAN FOREIGN FIRMS PREPARE FOR THESE CHANGES?

The overall cost of e-commerce is increasing, including expenses related to channel advertising and working with MCN (KOLs). For mature and resourceful leading brands, integrating Experiential marketing is crucial. This involves connecting with the target audience through a combination of classical social EC methods (e.g., live-streaming, platform algorithms (Tmall, Douyin), and KOLs selections) and providing attractive real-life experiences.

Currently, many brands seem to overlook the importance of the latter (e.g., how to select & set up a right & creative pop-up store's location? it's a good concept, but fewer succeed). People share their experiences on social media, create social buzz, and good photos/vlogs matter for social.

Q: HOW HAVE CHINESE FIRMS LEVERAGED INFLUENCERS FOR SOCIAL COMMERCE, AND WHAT CAN FOREIGN COMPANIES LEARN?

Chinese companies will use different types of KOLs to achieve three stages of goals on different functional social platforms:

1. Use those KOLs with good looking or good influence to establish brand awareness on the Weibo platform.
2. Use those KOLs with high-quality lifestyle tastes to establish brand perception and do seeding on the RED/BiliBili platform.
3. Use those KOLs who are good at sales to conduct live streaming on Taobao, Tmall, and JD platforms to achieve sales conversion.

Different types of KOLs and social commerce platforms with other functions have different missions, and the best-validated execution step is from step one to step three, which cannot be skipped. This is a valuable experience to learn and learn from.

Q: WHAT ARE KEY DISTINCTIONS IN CHINA'S SOCIAL COMMERCE, AND HOW CAN FOREIGN FIRMS ADAPT?

In China, there is no social without e-commerce and visa versa. They are so intrinsically integrated that brands cannot afford to develop a strategy that doesn't account for this unique, commerce-driven journey. And it's only growing.

China's social e-commerce market was projected to reach 2,854.28 billion yuan in 2022, growing at a rate of 20%, far surpassing the 4% growth of national online retail sales. As the integration of social traffic and e-commerce deepens, the industry is expected to achieve a transaction scale of 3,416.58 billion yuan in 2023.

Q: HOW DO CHINESE COMPANIES MANAGE SOCIAL COMMERCE PRIVACY AND SECURITY, AND WHAT CAN FOREIGN FIRMS LEARN?

Chinese companies in the social commerce space still implement some typical measures (which foreign companies are also using) to address privacy and security concerns, including transparent privacy policies, secure data storage, user consent and control, regular security audits, secure payment systems and enhanced account security. It's challenging to compare the ways and claim that foreign companies can learn from Chinese platforms' approaches.

Q: WHAT BENEFITS DOES SOCIAL COMMERCE OFFER IN CHINA, AND WILL ALL COMMERCE BECOME SOCIAL? IF SO, WHEN AND HOW?

As a TP, we've focused on conversion for our brand partners. Years ago, this meant mastering organic and paid traffic management on marketplaces. Social commerce often lacks a strong buying intention, but private traffic management makes a difference. Increased competition and unsustainable paid traffic led to a surge in customer retention operations.

The key benefit in social commerce is a robust private traffic strategy, connecting social media and e-commerce sales through a customer-centric CRM.

Traditional search-based commerce won't disappear, especially during economic uncertainty, affecting live-streaming and product-linked content performance.

Q: WHAT LEGAL AND REGULATORY FACTORS SHOULD FOREIGN FIRMS CONSIDER IN CHINA'S SOCIAL COMMERCE MARKET, AND HOW TO NAVIGATE THEM?

Foreign companies seeking to enter the Chinese social commerce market must understand that the operational requirements of China's social e-commerce are not set in stone. To successfully navigate this market, it is crucial to set realistic expectations and evaluate whether and how they can meet the differences in operational management.

Being agile and flexible in operating China's social commerce is increasingly important in the future years. This will test foreign companies' ability to detect new changes quickly and deploy different people with the relevant skill set to meet and manage new requirements.

Q: HOW DO CHINESE BUSINESSES UTILISE SOCIAL MEDIA FOR SOCIAL COMMERCE, AND WHAT LESSONS CAN INTERNATIONAL FIRMS LEARN?

Chinese companies focus on a differentiated product mix, consumer user experience (UX), integrated marketing, and pricing promotion. Brands are emphasising immersive experiences, newness, and segmentation. They incorporate trends such as nature, space, wellness, hip hop, and street culture, using digital technologies like virtual humans, digital collectibles, and gamification to make their communications stand out as new and fresh.

Foreign companies can learn from these strategies by adopting a customer-centric approach, creating immersive experiences, staying updated on trends, incorporating influencers, and strategically utilising different social media platforms to drive reach, validation, engagement, and conversions.

Q: WHAT DO YOU FORESEE FOR THE FUTURE OF SOCIAL COMMERCE IN CHINA?

Most live-streaming sessions currently adopt a "sell at all cost" way, with little focus on proximity.

However, a new trend in social e-commerce, called "quiet selling" live-streaming, offers a more refined way to showcase goods, resembling an offline experience and promoting premium products.

Brands should consider presenting their products within a lifestyle context. Advanced technology, such as AR, could be the next step to enhance proximity further.

Q: HOW DOES SOCIAL COMMERCE IN CHINA CONTRAST WITH CONVENTIONAL E-COMMERCE, AND WHICH PLAYERS DOMINATE PARTICULAR CATEGORIES AND FOR WHAT REASONS?

All commerce in China is social. Traditional marketplaces like Taobao / Tmall already transformed into community-driven entertainment and engagement platforms many years ago. The rise of interactive livestream as a mega channel, for example, was pioneered by Alibaba with Taobao Live.

But the biggest single shift we see post-Covid is a genuine preference for brand and product discovery through pure play short video and livestream platforms Douyin and Kuaishou and China's community review engine Little Red Book.

SOCIAL CHANNEL INTEGRATION

Social Channel Integration Strategies

Data unification and activation: Linking customer profiles with a single personal information identifier allows for effective personalization and targeted marketing.

Consent management: Chinese privacy regulations require transparent data gathering, ethical data use, and consumer consent. Consent management is crucial for cross-border data transfer and sensitive data storage.

Break down silos between marketing, sales, and service: Collect, unify, segment, and activate data from all touch-points for a 360° customer view.

Integrate Chinese social data with owned systems and CRM.

Orchestrate data for personalized content and generative customer journeys.

Curating Content Based on Consumer Intent Vectors

Identify key user preferences using keyword research, social listening, analyzing search queries, online behavior tracking, and user segmentation across social commerce channels.

Create user-specific CTAs for different leads to enhance the personalized experience.

Curate dynamic and real-time content using generative journeys, product reviews, user-generated content, and influencer collaborations.

Consider format and distribution channels, such as WeChat, to ensure content that resonates with the target audience.

LIVESTREAMING ON WECHAT

1-on-1 livestreams in China offer engaging, personalized experiences. Brands can showcase products, answer questions, build trust, and foster community, ultimately increasing the likelihood of a purchase.

Cartier offers personal 1-on-1 livestream product showcase service. Users can book a livestream showcase session on the product page.

- Before the showcase starts, a reminder is sent to the users' WeChat.
- During the meeting, users can browse product pages without leaving the livestream.
- After the meeting, the sales agent sends a list of products the user is interested to their personal account.

Strategies For 1-on-1 Product Showcase Livestreams

Provide a personalized 1-on-1 livestream product showcase service upon request, where customers can book an appointment with a product expert to showcase specific products and answer any questions.

Customers can join without opening their own camera but with audio open to ask questions or request other product showcases.

Allow customers to view the product page without leaving the livestream session. The livestream window can be floating at the bottom right corner while the customer is browsing the product page.

Send a template message reminder before the appointment to ensure customers remember and arrive on time.

Archive all the products that the customer is interested in, regardless of whether they were showcased or not. Send the list to the customer for further reference.

THE TECHNOLOGIES THAT POWER SOCIAL COMMERCE

CUSTOMER DATA PLATFORM (CDP)

A CDP for social commerce is a technological solution that collects, unifies, and analyzes customer data from various sources for marketing, sales, and service purposes.

International brands can orchestrate the data that's important for the Chinese market, such as:

- user location information
- conversion path data
- purchase history
- wishlists
- app activity
- click data
- data from private traffic, such as conversational data

Q: WHAT ARE YOUR PREDICTIONS FOR THE FUTURE OF SOCIAL COMMERCE IN CHINA?

I predict that social commerce will continue to thrive, especially for smaller niche brands where they often get lost among the masses of large traditional e-commerce platforms. Brands need to understand the connection between interest, content and sales in order to best understand how to convert consumers into loyal customers. Due to lower repeat purchase rates, social commerce will not replace the likes of Tmall and JD, but will become the first point of discovery for consumers.

Q: WHAT'S CHINA'S SOCIAL COMMERCE LANDSCAPE, AND WHICH CHANNELS EXCEL AND WHY?

Influencer marketing, livestream commerce, social sharing, user-generated content, and integrated payments contribute to the success of Chinese social commerce.

For example, WeChat, facilitates content sharing, product sales, and advanced customer service. WeChat Pay ensures seamless payments. Douyin, which emphasizes social interaction and live-streaming, has become a major player in social commerce. Kuaishou relies on domestic e-commerce platforms like Taobao and JD.com, while Xiaohongshu is famous for influencer cooperation, especially in disseminating ideas and creating trends.

Q: WHAT ESSENTIAL TECHNOLOGIES DRIVE SOCIAL COMMERCE SUCCESS, AND WHERE IS FURTHER DEVELOPMENT NEEDED?

All commerce in China is social. Traditional marketplaces like Taobao / Tmall already transformed into community-driven entertainment and engagement platforms many years ago. The rise of interactive livestream as a mega channel, for example, was pioneered by Alibaba with Taobao Live.

But the biggest single shift we see post-Covid is a genuine preference for brand and product discovery through pure play short video and livestream platforms Douyin and Kuaishou and China's community review engine Little Red Book.

Q: IS THE LUXURY INDUSTRY SUITED FOR SOCIAL COMMERCE? WHAT IS CHINA'S 2023 LUXURY TECH LANDSCAPE, AND WHERE ARE THE PRIMARY GROWTH AREAS?

It is no surprise that in the largest market in the world for Social Commerce (China), we've seen such extensive and transformational changes in the last 5 years. From a tool primarily suited to lower price point items, lower tier cities and group buying, social commerce has evolved into an attractive format also for brands operating in the luxury space.

Rather than seeing social commerce exclusively as a sales generator and promotional tool, treating it as a hybrid between community-building, engagement driver and an additional sales medium is often the best way for luxury brands to reap the benefits without damaging brand status & positioning.

Q: WHAT STRATEGIES DO CHINESE COMPANIES EMPLOY ON SOCIAL MEDIA PLATFORMS FOR SOCIAL COMMERCE, AND WHAT INSIGHTS CAN FOREIGN BUSINESSES GAIN FROM THEM?

The Chinese fragrance market has seen remarkable growth, with homegrown brand To Summer making a significant impact since its inception in 2018. Unique for its success in a domain dominated by foreign luxury brands, To Summer's strategy hinged on three factors. It positioned itself as an upscale, thoroughly Chinese brand, incorporating oriental elements into its branding and product design.

Finally, the brand boldly adopted an online-only sales strategy, using its DTC platform to drive consumer engagement and sales rather than just product promotion. By 2019, To Summer added retail experience stores as a supplementary part of its DTC approach.

Content and social commerce apps are diversifying China's online retail landscape. I think these platforms are offering different shopping moods compared to traditional shopping apps, making the process more entertaining and impulsive, suitable for certain types of products and one-off purchases.

Douyin is more experienced in converting short video watchers to consumers on their platforms, reaping rewards from their e-commerce investment in the recent few years. WeChat Channels and Xiaohongshu are expanding their e-commerce offerings this year.

Baidu launched Ernie Bot (Wenxin Yiyan), the first domestic generative AI product, in March, 2023. It supports various functions such as literary creation, copywriting, mathematical calculation, and multimodal generation.

Tencent's Hunyuan AI chatbot will be integrated into QQ and WeChat, serving users through Tencent Cloud. It broke three records in May 2022, topping CLUE (Chinese Language Understanding Evaluation) for reading comprehension and a large-scale knowledge graph, which organizes and represents knowledge using a graph structure for a domain or subject. It's currently used in WeChat search and Tencent advertising to enhance the search experience and ad recommendations.

Alibaba released the Tongyi (Universal) large model in September 2022. Based on the Tongyi large model system. It can handle various cross-modal tasks, including

- Image captioning
- Answering visual questions
- Audio-visual scene understanding
- Cross-lingual image-text retrieval
- Emotion and gesture recognition
- Sentiment analysis
- Cross-modal recommendations
- Multimodal dialogue

Q: WHICH PATTERNS ARE EMERGING WITHIN CHINA'S PRIVATE MARKETING, SALES, AND SERVICE DOMAINS?

I think there are four trends happening. First, in the field of livestreaming (a form of online marketing and sales), an increasing number of brand owners/ambassadors are engaging in live selling by themselves (instead of using KOLs) due to issues like KOLs' inappropriate brand marketing. Second, brands that possess attributes related to health and outdoor have strong sales opportunities. Third, livestreaming will not only focus on recommending purchases but also provide content, such as a down jacket brand live streaming from Mount Everest or an English teacher from New Oriental Education telling history or travel stories. Fourth, personalization matters.

Q: HOW IS CHINA'S 2023 CONSUMERISM? ARE EXPECTATIONS FOR H2 2023 AND H1 2024 POSITIVE OR NEGATIVE?

Shopping malls and restaurants are full of people, everyone is buying something. But don't be distracted by this visual illusion. If we check the numbers of the latest 618 shopping festival, which is typically a barometer of consumption in China, we can see that Chinese consumer confidence still remains weak. This happening despite the biggest discounts ever and billions of subsidies offered by Alibaba, JD, and Pinduoduo.

So as we see consumption is still recovering after the pandemic, and it probably will take another 6 months. But the positive trend is here, sales are growing month by month and I'm very optimistic about 2024.

Q: WHAT CHALLENGES MIGHT FOREIGN FIRMS ENCOUNTER IN CHINA'S SOCIAL COMMERCE MARKET, AND HOW CAN THEY BE ADDRESSED?

Foreign companies entering the Chinese social commerce market face challenges including cultural differences, a complex regulatory environment, stiff competition, and a unique digital landscape. Cultural differences may lead to ineffective marketing, regulatory changes can introduce risk, established local competition is tough to beat, and technological adaptations are necessary due to platforms like WeChat.

To overcome these, companies should invest in understanding local culture and consumer behavior, potentially hiring local experts. Adapting digital strategies to fit within China's unique online environment, building relationships with government bodies to navigate regulations, and partnering with local companies can help.

The recent 6.18 shopping festival highlighted the significance of content in China, where short videos, influencers, and livestreaming gained traction on Alibaba's marketplaces. Generative AI tech is also being explored to reduce content costs and drive further sales.

Apple product experts conducted their first livestream during 618, offering filmmaking tips and demonstrating the use of the Apple Watch for workouts. Q: WHAT KEY TRENDS WILL SHAPE CHINA'S SOCIAL COMMERCE FUTURE, AND HOW CAN FOREIGN COMPANIES ADAPT?

One key trend clearly continues to be video live streaming as a part of a wider social commerce expansion and Douyin has established itself as they dominant stand-alone player in this vertical. It is therefore a must for almost any brand from every conceivable category to be present on the platform, be it purely for branding and content marketing or actually using Douyin as a sales channel.

The biggest challenge for the latter is that the platform is highly discount driven and secondly customer loyalty and repurchase rate is comparatively low. This is why it is important to use Douyin as a customer acquisition channel, but at the same time implement a wider strategy of a brand-owned CRM & loyalty platform.

To improve personalized experiences on social commerce channels and increase conversions, international brands in China should rely less on major e-commerce marketplaces like Tmall and JD and instead collect more first-party data through WeChat and WeCom.

Third-party data can cause issues with inconsistency, transparency, and incomplete performance metrics.

What is first-party data in China?

First-party data in China can be obtained and consolidated from WeChat Mini Programs and official brand accounts.

How can brands collect first-party data?

1. Get user consent through 1-on-1 online customer support

Graff's official WeChat account enables customers to book appointments and provide location and preference information.

Graff also provides a WeCom contact for a 1:1 relationship, an industry standard in China.

Chat archiving and WeCom data integration into CRM systems helps track opportunities and improve performance.

How can brands collect first-party data?

2. Get consent with the right incentives at the right time

Brands must handle user information carefully under China's tightened PIPL (Personal Information Privacy Law) with varying consent levels.

Montblanc requests consent via pop-up windows at key user journey stages, offering member or visitor browsing options.

Incentives offered at checkout and wish list additions encourage users to give consent and log in to their accounts.

Q: WHICH TOP CHINESE SOCIAL COMMERCE BRANDS EXCEL, AND WHAT ARE THEIR STRENGTHS AND WEAKNESSES?

Perfect Diary effectively utilize WeChat groups and mini-programs, which contribute to approximately 25% of their sales. Perfect Diary has successfully employed social media campaigns, collaborating with KOLs and being an early adopter of RED to enhance brand awareness.

However, their heavy focus on marketing, allocating 60% of total investment to social media marketing, has led to a decline in attraction over time.

Social commerce alone is insufficient for long-term success. Brands need to focus on developing a captivating brand story and continuously innovating their products to keep customers engaged and loyal. Q: WHAT SOCIAL COMMERCE TRENDS IN CHINA DO YOU FORESEE GAINING SIGNIFICANT TRACTION IN 2023?

Social media is really a utility. Messenger and newsfeeds don't change that much. It's why we see 1-2 dominant players per region. E-commerce is the area that changes more and gives greater opportunity for differentiation.

We see lots of creativity here and I expect that to continue. More and more we should see a shift from offering everything in one giant store (Amazon, Taobao), to curated and differentiated news feeds (Pinduoduo and TikTok Shop).

Q: WHAT ARE CHINA'S TOP SOCIAL COMMERCE CONSUMER JOURNEYS AND TRENDS IN 2023/24?

Fuelled by the increasing trust and democratisation of KOLs and KOCs, the 'Shop from Content' and 'Shop from Livestream' pathways continue to be the most prominent consumer journeys in China's social commerce landscape.

The widespread popularity of short video content on platforms such as Douyin and Kuaishou significantly bolsters the 'Shop from Content' model. With recent enhancements rolled out by Xiaohongshu, including the ability for brands to embed direct product page links within sponsored content, the 'Shop from Content' approach is anticipated to retain its status as one of the preferred social commerce pathways in China.

Q: HOW CAN FOREIGN COMPANIES REPLICATE CHINA'S SOCIAL COMMERCE SUCCESS FACTORS?

Live-streaming is currently a significant trend in China, accounting for 50% of all e-commerce sales, a phenomenon yet to be fully embraced by the West, although platforms like TikTok are pushing for it. Replicating the Chinese model may be challenging due to cultural differences and demographic factors; China's extensive online populace can easily boost any live-stream event's success.

When one mentions live-streaming in the West, people normally visualize some fast-talking salesman who is pushing heavily discounted merchandise. But in China, live-streaming extends beyond just sales; it serves as a tool for product education and post-sales inquiries. Even luxury brands leverage private, exclusive live streams to engage with VIP clients. These elements of live-streaming could be adapted outside of China and used by brands seeking to enhance customer relationships and foster loyalty.

Q: WHAT CAN FOREIGN FIRMS LEARN FROM CHINESE COMPANIES' APPROACH TO SOCIAL COMMERCE CUSTOMER SERVICE AND USER EXPERIENCE?

The introduction of private groups a few years ago was a significant move to leverage and push O2O sales. But as the practice tends to become mainstream, consumers now tend to enter these groups mostly/only lured by immediate benefits (samples, lottery) and then mute or stay low in these groups.

Some Chinese brands -like To Summer- are now operating in a more subtle way, inviting 体验官 “product experience officers” to add the brand by themselves, rather than massively and in-distinctively trying to pull in consumers. I believe it creates stronger and more durable kind of connections, going much beyond the mere promotional sales push. This could inspire Western brands willing to build communities rather than groups.

Q: WHAT ARE KEY DIFFERENCES IN CHINA'S SOCIAL COMMERCE, AND HOW CAN FOREIGN FIRMS ADAPT?

1. Chinese consumers skipped desktop social and shopping platforms almost entirely - so a far wider demographic of Chinese consumers access social platforms, on their mobiles, for a much larger proportion of their day. This means they are accustomed to heavily gamified, or social shopping experiences - and it's easier to push for conversation, from tech-savvy gen-z-ers, all the way to Chinese baby boomers.

2. Guanxi culture still permeates Chinese shopper behaviour - "it's not what you know, but who", which is why influencers, and micro influencers are exceptionally effective in social commerce spaces at building the feeling of a personal connection, and upping valuable trust points, when building a brand here.

Q: WHAT CHALLENGES MIGHT FOREIGN COMPANIES FACE IN CHINA'S SOCIAL COMMERCE MARKET, AND HOW CAN THEY OVERCOME THEM?

Pressured by brand launch timeline, often times new brand might work with a TP (Tmall partner) to get launched first before fully defining the brand platform or brand identity (including localised messaging, story, tagline, communication guidelines etc), and TP is mostly sales driven in brand objectives. This might damage brand image in the long term with un-localised brand elements not resonating with local consumers, or messy assets that's not true to the brand essence.

Q: WHAT TRENDS DO YOU SEE IN PRIVATE DOMAINS FOR MARKETING, SALES, AND SERVICE IN CHINA?

I believe the emergence of value-based community & experiential marketing is reshaping the concept of "private domains". Driven by the growing personal interests and awareness of different values & lifestyle (instead of discounting).

Value-based communities are mentally connected and highly engaged, but not yet centralised at mass scale. This shift goes beyond traditional platform groups, and traffic-driven approaches.

Experiential marketing has to be immersive, localised and up-to-date, to let users feel comfortable, easier and happier to connect and engage with. This trend is evident through various activities and topics such as IP collaborations, interests-based groups & activities.

In a strict definition the consensus is that currently approx. 20% of all e-commerce sales are generated through social live commerce channels, meaning via video streaming. This matches data for this year's 2023 618 campaign, for which third-party monitoring providers reported that 184.4 billion RMB, or 23%, out of a total volume of 798.7 billion RMB GMV were generated by livestreaming e-commerce platforms, with Douyin being by far the largest channel. Q: WHAT ARE THE MAJOR OPPORTUNITIES AND THREATS IN SOCIAL COMMERCE SPACE FOR FMCG BRANDS IN 2023/24 IN CHINA?

In the post-traffic era, brands that are unable to cater to the extreme price-sensitive audience or create and convey great values tapping into the new middle-class generations will vanish in the next five to ten years.

The post-traffic era refers to the time when traffic is no longer the primary source of revenue for businesses. Brands that are unable to cater to the extreme price-sensitive audience may lose out on potential customers who are looking for cheaper alternatives. Similarly, brands that are unable to create and convey great values tapping into the new middle-class generations may lose out on potential customers who are looking for brands that align with their values and beliefs.

Q: WHAT ARE KEY SUCCESS FACTORS FOR CHINESE SOCIAL COMMERCE, AND HOW CAN FOREIGN FIRMS APPLY THEM IN THEIR MARKETS?

Chinese consumers typically want a relationship with a brand that is deeper than that sought by Western customers. Many Western consumers are only seeking a transaction; they want the product. Chinese consumers are seeking a conversation.

They want to engage with the brand, to understand the nuances of the product, and to explore questions in a controlled setting. Social media facilitates this journey and also allows brands to blend in examples of success, celebrity endorsements, and other brand strengths into the conversation.

Q: WHAT CAN FOREIGN FIRMS LEARN FROM CHINESE COMPANIES' CROSS-BORDER SOCIAL COMMERCE STRATEGIES FOR GLOBAL EXPANSION?

China has been open to cross-border platforms and social commerce for some time now, and brands of all shapes and sizes have taken this chance to approach the Chinese market without the strict need for a physical presence - or stockpoint - in the country.

Navigating cross-border social commerce in China requires companies to be predictive & responsive to constantly evolving market and consumer trends, and agile enough to pivot, shift, or transition to respond to said trends.

Q: WHAT CAN FOREIGN TECH LEARN FROM CHINA'S CUSTOMER-CENTRIC DIGITAL JOURNEY AND SOCIAL COMMERCE, AND WHAT CAN CHINA LEARN FROM THE GLOBAL LANDSCAPE?

Tech/digital products in China focus on customer needs but also dare to lead the customers to a vision that the companies believe in. They solve people's problems and also deliver more. There is a belief that customers can and are willing to learn and adapt to new ideas, which leads to innovations in the tech industry. Foreign firms could adopt this attitude - having more faith in customers' ability to adapt while helping them adjust.

Digital journeys in China could use better UX design. This is something I think companies in China should learn from others. Tech firms in China need to be better at fine-tuning their UX to better deliver products and services.

Q: WHICH CHALLENGES DO FOREIGN FIRMS FACE IN CHINA'S SOCIAL COMMERCE MARKET, AND HOW CAN THEY OVERCOME THEM?

Firstly, foreign companies need to understand the numerous and diverse social commerce platforms that incorporate social video, livestreaming, and community purchasing.

Secondly, social commerce relies on being social to drive sales. Foreign brands must create compelling content that attracts consumer interest.

Thirdly, social commerce requires strategic content planning and tactics to deliver on the brand's story while satisfying consumers' desire for newness. It's important to adapt to the high frequency of Chinese shopping festivals.

DIRECTLY.

1. MERGING MARKETING AND TRANSACTIONS

ACTIONABLE TIPS

In China, social media platforms such as WeChat, Weibo, and Douyin are not just used for socializing, but also for shopping.

Utilizing social media platforms, Western brands have the opportunity to interact with their customers and boost sales by directly selling products through these channels.

This can be done through shoppable posts or by integrating buy buttons or links to online stores into social media ads.

By making it easy for customers to make a purchase directly from social media, businesses can increase conversion rates and drive sales.

SEGMENT USERS
BASED ON THEIR PREFERENCES.

2. OFFER PERSONALIZATION

ACTIONABLE TIPS

For crafting highly personalized experiences, it is advised to monitor customer actions across all touchpoints and categorize users according to their preferences. This facilitates the development of customized pathways and the automation of bespoke experiences.

For example, use consumer-preferred platforms and relevant content to attract and engage with customers. By meeting customers where they are and providing content that resonates with their interests, businesses can build stronger relationships with their audience and create a more positive brand image.

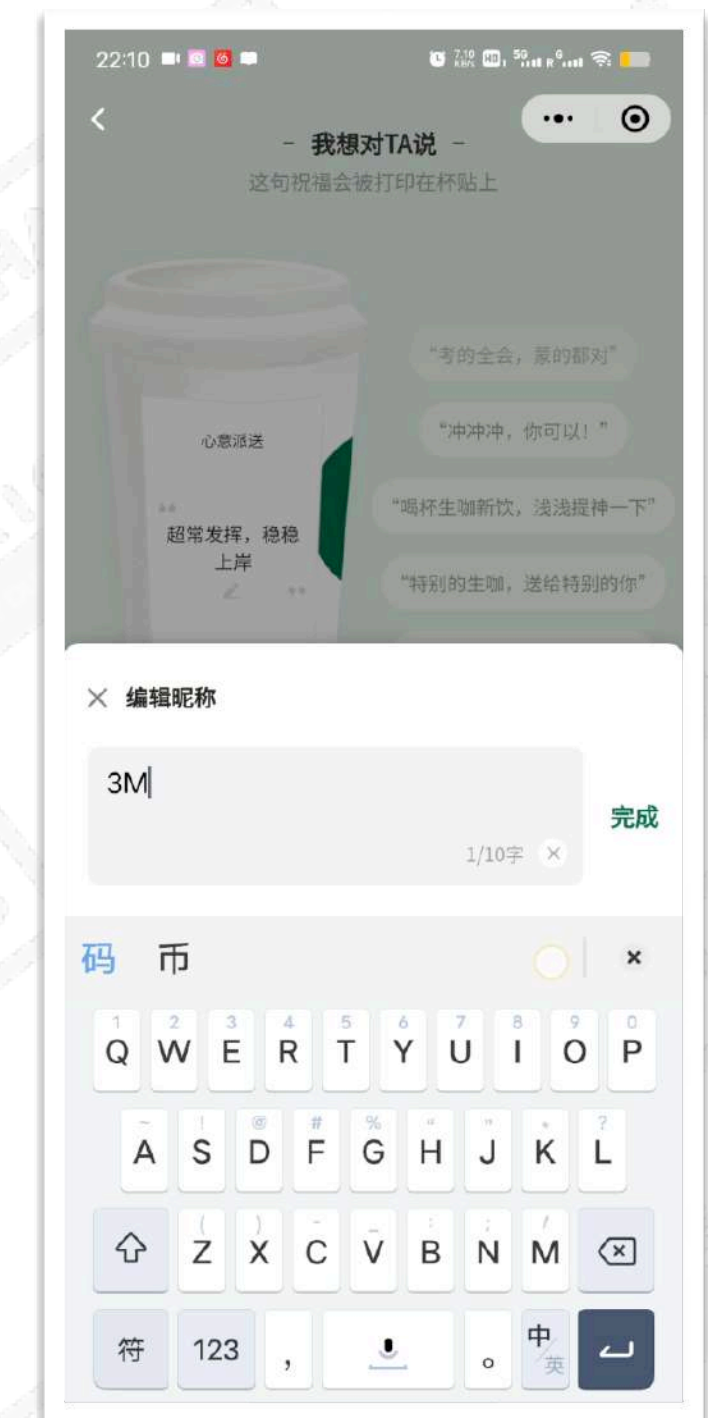

By segmenting our target audience and developing personalized marketing strategies, we can create more meaningful connections with our customers, improve customer engagement, and ultimately increase sales and revenue.

3. UNIFY YOUR DATA

ACTIONABLE TIPS

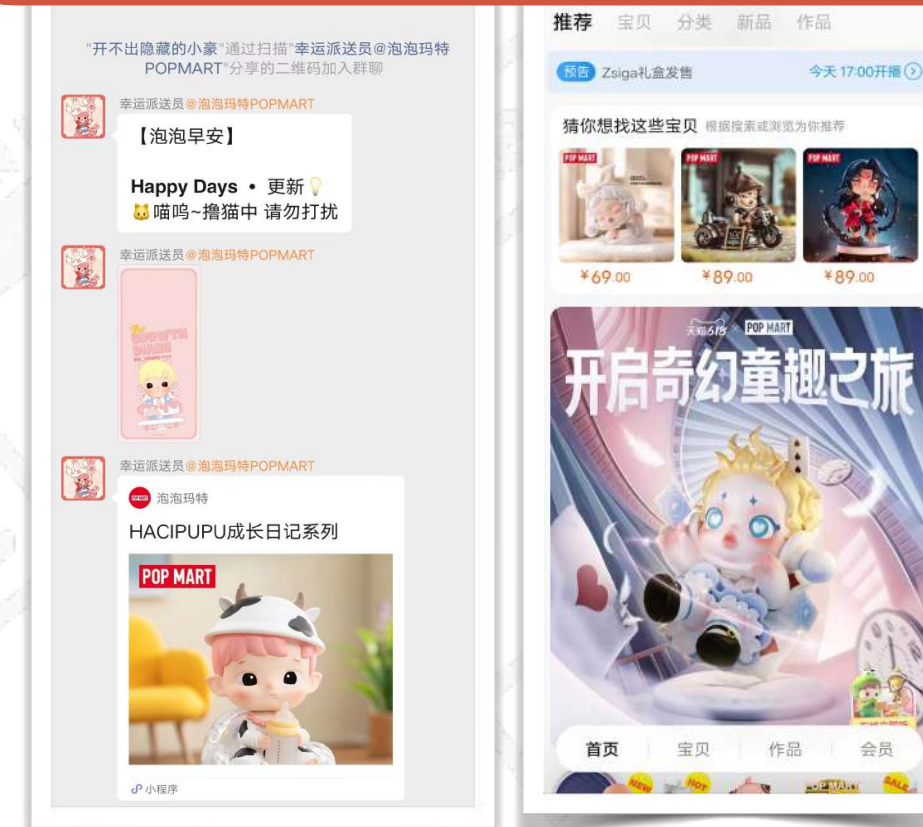

For the creation of all-encompassing 360-degree customer profiles, it is best to merge the information from both your social media followers and your sales channel clientele.

This provides a complete view of your customers' interactions and behaviors across various channels, enabling you to personalize the customer experience and improve engagement.

Unified membership code (ID) integration has been achieved for offline channels, Tmall platform, and WeChat mini program, enabling seamless integration of membership levels and loyalty points, and achieving omnichannel management.
